GREAT NEWS!

If your child turns 3 or 4 this year, it is time to start thinking about pre-school. The NYC Department of Education is now accepting pre-kindergarten applications for the 2018-2019 school year. The city's Pre-K for All program guarantees every 4-year-old a space in a full-day pre-kindergarten classroom from September to June. Anyone with a child born in 2014 can apply from now until March 30, 2018.

Parents of 3-year-olds living in any of six school districts can also apply now for the city's "3-K for All" program, which aims to get kids started in school a year earlier. Applications for kids born in 2015 are due May 11, 2018.

Those classes will be available next school year in Districts 4 and 5 in Manhattan, District 7 in the Bronx, Districts 16 and 23 in Brooklyn, and District 27 in Queens.

Visit www.nyc.gov/education to apply or for more information.
WOULD YOU LIKE TO HELP DURING A DISASTER OR EMERGENCY?

New York City Community Emergency Response Teams (NYC CERT) are groups of dedicated volunteers who help to prepare their neighbors and communities for different types of disasters. NYC CERT falls under the Community Outreach unit within New York City Emergency Management, the City's coordinating agency for organizations and agencies involved in emergency planning, education, and information dissemination.

Emergency services personnel are the best equipped to respond to disasters. NYC CERT volunteers are trained to support the efforts of New York City's first responders. During non-emergency times, NYC CERTs educate their communities about emergency preparedness by working with the Ready New York program and build community disaster networks through the NYC Citizen Corps program.

All NYC CERT members are required to undergo an intensive 10-week training program that raises awareness about emergencies and disasters and provides basic response skills needed for fire safety, light search and rescue, disaster medical operations, and traffic control.

Held on consecutive evenings for 10 weeks within one of the five boroughs, classes are approximately three hours long and are interactive with relevant emergency and disaster discussions and group-building activities based on the Incident Command System (ICS). NYC CERT instructors are active FDNY, NYPD, and NYC Emergency Management personnel.

Upon completion of the 10 weeks of training, volunteers are invited to a formal graduation ceremony and proceed to join their local CERT and support their communities by assisting with emergency education and response.

If you are interested in becoming a CERT member, visit http://www1.nyc.gov/site/em/community_business/nyc-cert-join.page.

FIRE SAFETY PREVENTION AND TIPS

In an effort to inform New Yorkers about the dangers of fires and how best to act if in one, the FDNY has published the following 7 tips:

1. Never use an extension cord with large current appliances such as a space heater, air conditioner or refrigerator. Extension cords can cause home fires by overheating due to overloading the outlet.

2. Never smoke while lying down, especially if drowsy, medicated or have been drinking. Completely douse cigarette butts with water before discarding. Smokers are seven times more likely than nonsmokers to have a fire in their home.

3. Stay in the kitchen while cooking and wear short or tight fitting sleeves. Unattended cooking accounts for thirty-three percent of home fires.

4. Installing and maintaining a smoke alarm will reduce your chances of dying in a fire in half. Install smoke alarms on every floor and in bedrooms for extra protection. 70% of fire deaths occur in homes with an inoperable smoke alarm or no smoke alarm present. The majority of the deaths are children and older adults.

5. Plan and practice a fire escape plan. Do not attempt to fight the fire yourself. Get out and CLOSE THE DOOR behind you. Call 911 from a safe location. Smoke and fire kills! You may have less than three minutes to get to safety.

6. Store matches and lighters out of reach and sight of children. Provide close continuous supervision of children. Toddler fire deaths are most often due to children playing with matches or utility lighters.

7. Never leave burning candles unattended. Half of the people killed by candle fires in the home were younger than 20 years of age.
Following these simple 7 tips could save your life and others as well as protect your property. Be aware, be smart, and most importantly, be safe.

PROTECT YOUR WATER METER AND PIPES FROM FREEZING

Most water meters and pipes are in basements, crawl spaces, and other unheated areas where cold winter temperatures could cause them to freeze. Homeowners are responsible for protecting meters and pipes from freezing. If the meter freezes and breaks because you failed to take reasonable steps to protect it, DEP will repair or replace the meter and bill you for the cost. If the service line or piping freezes and breaks, it is the homeowner’s responsibility to have repairs made by a licensed plumber.

Some tips and suggestions to prevent freezing:
- Repair broken and cracked windows, doors, and walls
- Install storm windows on basement windows
- Tightly close doors and windows to the outside
- Insulate outside walls and eliminate drafts from crawl spaces
- Turn off water to outside faucets, remove hoses, and drain the pipes
- Insulate your pipes and meters. You may need to contact a licensed plumber to see which materials to use.
- If you are going to be away from home for several days during cold weather, arrange to have someone visit periodically to turn on a faucet to ensure that the water is still flowing

If your service line, pipes, or meters freeze, keep in mind:
- Open a faucet near the frozen point to release vapor from melting ice
- Direct a hair dryer or heat lamp at the frozen section or put a small space heater nearby

- NEVER thaw a frozen pipe or meter with an open flame. This is not only a fire hazard, but could also cause a steam explosion and significant injury
- If you are unable to thaw the frozen pipe yourself, consult a licensed plumber.

HUNGER AND BODY ISSUES: SILENT KILLERS

For many Americans, the prospect of a full stomach is but a mere dream. The latest numbers indicate that at least 1 in 7 Americans are hungry (the numbers might even be higher for those families and individuals not eligible for food stamps), and the majority of the hungry are either children or the elderly. In New York City, hunger is a legitimate threat. Quality affordable healthy food is scarce in many underserved and less wealthy communities, and “food deserts” prevail in many areas across the city.

On the opposite side of the spectrum are those that have access to food and willingly put themselves in a position to be hungry because of an eating disorder due to negative body and self-images. Eating disorders have reached new heights as new and almost impossible to reach beauty standards have become normalized by society. Randomized clothing sizes for girls and women exacerbate the problem and help foster these negative self-images as manufacturers deviate from normal sizing, thus causing average women to feel fat because the label on their clothing says a displeasing number, all while not knowing that these sizing labels are completely arbitrary.

So what can we do to combat both hunger and eating disorders? The first thing we can do is recognize the problem to start creating solutions. With SNAP benefits and Meals on Wheels at risk of being further reduced at the Federal level and are losing their funding, we must put pressure on our federal elected officials to make an end to hunger in the United States as much of a priority as they place on ending hunger in countries around the world.

Second, we need to stop stigmatizing those that may not be as blessed as some of us financially. Many people that are hungry are too afraid to come forward, and children are even chastised by their peers for needing free school lunch. Educate your children that differences abound, yet we are all equal. No one chooses to be hungry, and children have no way to remediate their family’s financial condition.

Third, parents: observe your children, both male and female. Males are not exempt from eating disorders, contrary to popular belief. Make sure they are eating. If they are exhibiting signs of ill health for no apparent reason (ashen skin, sunken eyes, lethargy, emotional distance, changes in mood, etc.) or do not seem to be consuming a decent amount of sustenance daily, do not be afraid to ask questions! Take an active role in your child’s life. If you notice changes in eating patterns, notice that your child goes to the bathroom immediately after every meal, eat smaller than normal portions, or simply refuses to eat at all, get help immediately as they may be showing indications of an eating disorder. Psychological counseling should not be scoffed at, and your child should not be ashamed to seek it.

We must all do our part in stopping hunger related issues, whether because of poverty or poor body and self-images. We can donate to our local food banks, not criticize the poor, check in on seniors to make sure they have enough to eat or help them enroll in a program such as Meals on Wheels, and speak to youth to make sure they are doing well and know with certainty that there is nothing wrong with them as they are and that they do not have to fit this “normalized beauty standard” to be considered beautiful. Hunger is the silent killer that many of us ignore. Ignorance is not bliss, however. Let us work together to stop hunger.
