MARCH 2015

District Manager's Report

DID YOU KNOW THAT DISPOSABLE WIPES ARE NOT FLUSHABLE?

Disposable personal hygiene wipes and baby wipes may be disposable, but they are not exactly flushable. Next time you go to toss that wipe in the toilet, you might want to consider a request from the Dept. of Environmental Protection asking you to refrain from doing so.

Rapidly growing use of pre-moistened personal wipes, which are used most often by potty-training toddlers and people seeing what is advertised as a more thorough cleaning than toilet paper—are clogging pipes and jamming our sewer system.

In addition to wipes, pop-off scrubbers on toilet cleaning wands as well as other disposable items are increasingly being erroneously marketed as flushable. Even everthickening toilet paper is worrisome because it takes longer to disintegrate.

These items contribute to blockages that cause sewage to overflow into streams and rivers and back up into basements in the city. The wipes are disposable but not flushable. These items are costing taxpayers an additional $3 million a year to clean out our sewer system. So keep in mind: just because a box of wipes is labelled “flushable” does not mean it breaks down in the pipes like toilet paper. Think before you flush.

HOME ENERGY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM EXTENDED

Governor Cuomo announced that those in danger of running out of heating fuel or having their utility service shut off can now apply for a second emergency benefit through the Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP). The additional assistance is being made available in light of the prolonged cold weather and additional federal funding awarded to the state.

For more information about HEAP, please call the hotline at 1-800-342-3009 or visit http://otda.ny.gov/programs/heap/. New Yorkers can find contact information for their county department of social services at http://otda.ny.gov/programs/heap/HEAP-contacts.pdf.

ARE YOU PAYING TOO MUCH FOR RENT?

Landlords have been scamming tenants across the city, charging market rate for rent stabilized units. But there is help! A new website is helping New Yorkers find out if they are being scammed.

www.amirentstabilized.com is a site that allows users to search for their buildings in a database and find out if there is a change their unit should be protected under the city’s rent-stabilization rules. The website will tell you if your building is on the city’s list of addresses with units still on the rent stabilization rolls. While it cannot tell you if your specific unit is one of them, it will help you navigate through the process of tracking that information down. The site contact links to different state agencies to help you get confirmation of your unit’s status as well as forms to fill out a complaint if you are being over-charged.
